BIO

Bryce Baringer is a 23 year old college football player. Baringer plays at Michigan State University as a punter. He could easily be one of the best punters in the U.S., and he is making his way there. He also holds many records at MSU one being No. 1 on MSU career punt average. Baringer puts a lot of effort into football while also working on his masters at MSU.

Q&A

Personally, I think that having an important role in sports can be stressful, but when asked about stress Baringer said nothing of the sort. He said something around the lines of "I am excited, not stressed because it's another chance to have fun with team mates". Community is also a big part of football. How a team becomes more like a family and Spartianation are examples of how community ties into football and creates relationships that make lifelong friends.

OUTSIDE FOOTBALL

Outside football Baringer attends school and enjoys golf, but considering Baringer puts an impressive 5 to 6 hours into football everyday, it is hard to imagine him having too much free time."

SEASON

Baringer states that his season has been pretty good. He has been happy with how he has personally performed and is excited for any upcoming games. Baringer says he is very lucky to have played many seasons at MSU and he is very grateful for it, he is especially pleased with getting the chance to play in the senior bowl, which is a game played to show off top NFL prospects who have completed their college entitlement. Baringer believes he does have a future in the NFL, and I think he does too.
