

Have you been wondering about the big ten expanding lately, well then read on in this article. I will be covering some stats about the two teams, an interview with a big ten coach and some basic information.

The two teams joining the Big Ten are USC And UCLA. These two teams have a great history , USC has the sixth-most college football national championships with 6 titles. While UCLA has not as great football history but still has one championship title. The two teams will boost the Big ten greatly as they are such great teams. The big ten will gain more popularity, and popularity means money, Big Money to the Big Ten. These new teams are bringing in new television contracts that could bring in an influx of money. The Big Ten could be the first conference to bring in 1 billion from its television deals. There are still many more great things coming from the big ten when these two teams join in 2024.

In a big ten interview a big ten coach was excited for the expansion of the conference. He was not just excited about athletics too, the coach proclaimed. "...But academics is incredibly important," the coach explained. He continues to explain great alumni that came out of USC. Thank you for reading my article and learning about the big ten expansion.
