How life is for college football players

Life for college football players is different than how you expect even now in covid. I interviewed college football player Dylan Powell (my name is also Dillon Powell) and learned so very much from him. I am only 11, far from being in college and knew what it was like, and then after interviewing college football player Dylan Powell I realized it is very different than what you would expect. Dylan Powell said you wake up at 5:45 and go to treatment and rehab then head to a team meeting at 7:10 to 8:45 and then they practice from 9:00 to 11:00. He also said football practice is tough and a full time commitment. He is taking online courses this semester. As a career, Dylan Powell is going to tryout for the NFL then if he doesn't make the NFL he will go into business. Dylan Powell was born in Hannibal Missouri he currently has his bachelor's degree and he is trying to get his masters. I also really enjoyed talking to him.
